CD ..for Complete Domination of the games universe

VIDEO games fans have given a trigger-blasting thumbs up to Sega's Mega CD.

At the beginning of the month Britain was chosen as the first country in Europe to get the ground-breaking add-on for the Mega Drive.

Only 70,000 units were shipped into the UK and the Japanese games giants held their breath to see if the £270 compact disc games player would take off.

Now they wish they had ordered more. Says a spokesman for Sega Europe: "We are not getting another shipment into Britain until September."

"And judging by the speed the Mega CD is being snapped up our existing stocks could be gone by the end of May."

"It's rather like Madonna's sex book. We have put out a limited edition and now we have seen how the market is moving we will release greater numbers of Mega CDs later in the year."

Originally it had been hoped to sell the Mega CD in the UK for less than £200 but the devaluation of the pound last year put paid to that.

CLUED UP: New cases for Sherlock Holmes and Watson

Not that it mattered. Die-hard games fans realise it heralds the future of gaming.

Here is what the Mega CD has to offer:

Most Mega Drive cartridge games are eight Mbits. A CD can contain more than 500 times that.

Instead of a small sound spectrum it uses quality sound just like an audio CD and has no problem handling perfect speech.

Of course, if it is hooked up through your hi-fi the Mega CD doubles as an audio CD player so you can also play albums.

Graphically it allows special effects never before seen on the Mega Drive and feeds the machine with uninterrupted information.

THAT means future CD games will be much larger and have more levels than on an ordinary cart.

It also means real digitised film footage can be used to enhance the atmosphere of the games.

Mega CD games are still in their infancy but the future looks so bright we could soon be wearing Virtual Reality shades.

Here are some of the new games planned for this year:

★ JURASSIC PARK: Another real film footage epic, from the Spielberg movie.

★ ECCO THE DOLPHIN: A new version of the Mega Drive classic with fully orchestrated music and extra levels.

★ BATMAN RETURNS: With the soundtrack from the actual film including the voices of Danny De Vito and Michelle Pfeiffer.

★ SONIC 2: The CD version will be larger and better than the cart and a CD Sonic pinball sim is being devised.

★ AFTERBURNER 3: The legendary blast-em-up gets better with a rock 'n' roll James Brown soundtrack.

★ NIGHT TRAP: A massive two-disc game filmed especially for the Mega CD with a mind-blowing 900Mbytes of info.

NAILBITING: Get your teeth into Night Trap, and battle the bloodthirsty vampires ★ VIRTUA: A virtual VCR game that is like Lawnmower Man for the Mega CD.

★ SHERLOCK HOLMES 2: With three new baffling cases.

★ THUNDERHAWK: A full helicopter sim in 3D.

★ FINAL FIGHT: An arcade-perfect version of the classic beat-em-up with extra levels and fully-digitised sound effects.

PIRATE TV INVASION!

A SURVEY by Sega has shown that many teenagers would rather spend time playing video games on a TV screen than watching programmes. Says a spokesman for Sega: "The role of the television set is changing dramatically in British homes. And with perfect sound and film footage from the Mega CD game playing is now the alternative pirate TV. It is a 24-hour TV channel packed with everything from sports simulations to mentally challenging programmes. It is certainly the future for the television."

PIONEER PAIR: Kriss Kross pictured in real life and (inset) a clip from the video footage. The duo kick off the first Mega CD – and Sega is keeping its fingers crossed that the latest concept in home entertainment will be a hit

Now you can

MUSIC

MICHAEL JACKSON'S are full of colour and action and can cost hundreds of thousands of pounds. More modestly, Madonna and George Michael have both released ones in black and white.

The rock video is essential to making hit records and, some might argue, even more creative than the music itself.

Until now, only top directors have had the cash and the clout to make videos. But the Mega CD will change all that.

Sega is set to release a whole range of Make Your Own Videos.

The first stars Kriss Kross with actual film footage and sound. Others on the way feature Marky Mark and The Funky Bunch; INXS; U2; Prince and C & C Music Factory.

The idea is perhaps the most revolutionary yet because it allows the player full scope in creating an entirely new piece of software.

And it is a boost for the faltering music business that has been hit hard by the games boom.

Says a spokesman for Sega: "It is a major breakthrough for both the games and music industry and gives the player a chance to be the director of a pop video. "You get between three and five songs on each CD and then you are asked to make the video in a specific way.

"For instance, you might have to make one with as much Marky Mark as you can without his shirt on. Or perhaps one featuring him with as many fast cars as possible.

"It's up to you to edit the footage to make the best video you can, using strobe lights, lyrics, cutting and editing devices and other visual effects.

Favourites

"Your efforts will then be marked by the Mega Drive."

The Make Your Own Video CDs will be released at the rate of one a month at a cost of around £40 each.

Contemporary stars will be followed, it is hoped, by old favourites such as the Jimi Hendrix Experience or the Beatles.

"This is only the beginning," Sega says. "The horizons are infinite, and we hope to move on to Make Your Own Pop Record very soon.

"We think the CDs are already good value for money but

BAND OF GOLD: INXS are set to star on a Mega CD

By DAVID HANCOCK

expect the price to fall as the market expands.

"If you bought a Marky Mark CD and a Marky Mark video you would be looking at nearly £30. For an extra tenner you get both – plus the chance to mix them into something totally new."

We had a look at the Make Your Own Kriss Kross Video, priced at £39.99.

Most of the footage comes from three boxes at the bottom of the screen. They are controlled by buttons A, B and C and switching between them couldn't be easier.

There are lots of strange images, including promos of the group, women and monsters. Just by flicking the buttons you can make something utterly surreal. But it doesn't get and it's down to you to get the breaks scrolling smoothly.

Above these boxes is the finished footage box which lets you see what you are creating as you go along.

And to the left is the effects box which lets you do just about anything – flip the screen over, break it into stripes, freeze the action, strobe the frames, go into slow motion, blowing up the pixels, and even jumble everything up.

Creative

The package offers excellent creative fun. And, thanks to the battery back-up, you can save your masterpiece to bore your friends with.

Unfortunately, the Kriss Kross CD contains only three songs. It would have been better to have a lot more.

The C & C Music Factory CD is due out in the early summer and is slightly more sophisticated. Apart from having better songs – well did you really like Jump! – the storyline has you helping out the backroom boys at the Music Factory.

You are told the essential parts of the video you have to make and are then let loose.

The footage on this one seems to have been better digitised with a smoother quality that looks less pixelated.

But what is really breathtaking about the Make Your Own Video concept is that it's a new idea from an industry bogged down by platform games and beat-em-ups. It not only brings together today's two main entertainment areas - rock and video games - it looks like breathing new life into both of them.

If you can't be bothered with making your own video, the Mega CD has another ace up its sleeve - it can also play CD + G discs. These are ordinary compact discs that play quality stereo audio through the speakers at the same time as showing the videos on the TV.

As yet only supergroups such as Fleetwood Mac have CD + G releases but plenty more will soon jump on the bandwagon.

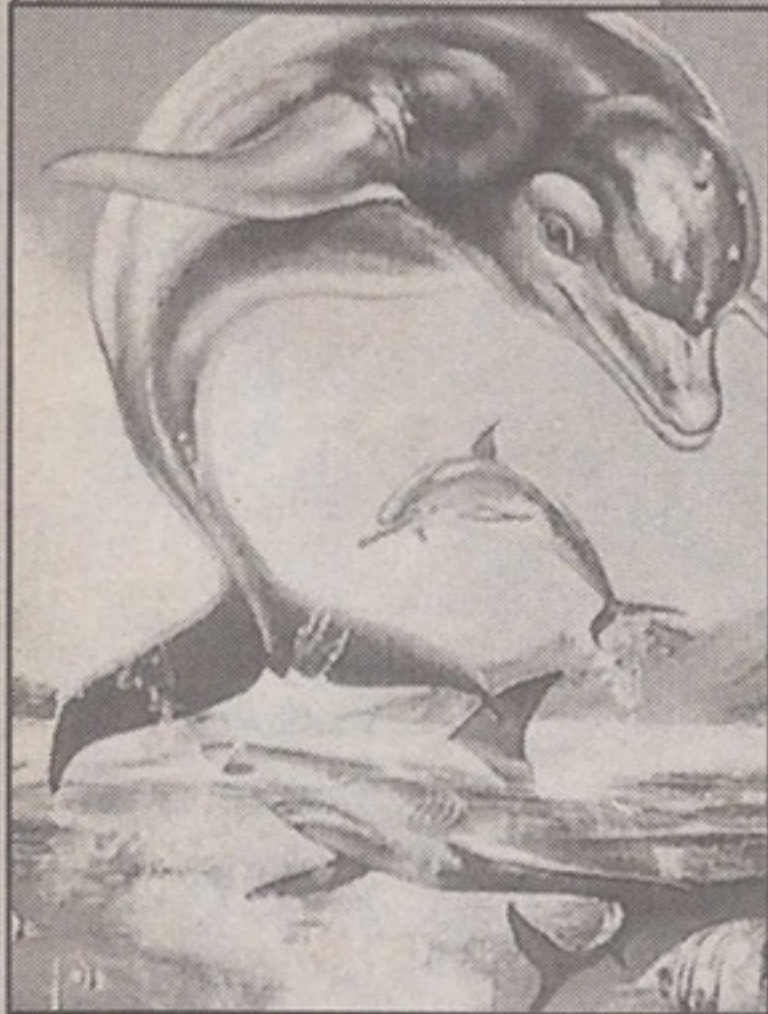

That means with your new video-making experience you can have the smug satisfaction of being able to rubbish the lot.

IN THE SWIM: Pamela Anderson

Ecco to the rescue

ONE of Sega's favourite characters, Ecco The Dolphin, has a new swimming partner.

He has teamed up with Pamela Anderson from the hit TV show Baywatch.

And they plan to visit Britain later this year to teach life-saving skills to school children.

They will be joined by Pamela's co-star David Hasselhoff to help promote safety in the water.

It's the latest idea from Sega and helps illustrate just how big the company has become when it can attract such big-name international stars.

"They will tour schools in September and October talking about life-saving techniques," says a Sega spokesman.

"They will also be trying to teach the children to swim, and will give them the chance of winning a special swimming certificate from Ecco."

MEGA

How Sega became the main event

IF YOU had mentioned Sega to anyone a few years ago they probably would have thought you were inviting them on a holiday catering for senior citizens.

Do it now and it's odds-on they'll know you are talking about the leading company in the billion-pound European video games industry.

What a difference a couple of years and a speedy little hedgehog called Sonic can make.

Sega - not Saga - is the Japanese games company that seems to have come from nowhere to be a household name in Britain.

In fact it has been building its profile by shrewdly investing in some of the best sporting traditions Britain can offer.

Last year, in the UK for instance, it sponsored the England football team and the ITV coverage of the European Football Championship from Sweden.

Winning

And this year it has hit the jackpot by linking with the Canon-Williams team, winners of the 1992 Formula One motor racing world championship.

Williams have started this season well with Alain Prost winning the first Grand Prix in South Africa and team-mate Damon Hill finishing second in both the Brazilian and European Grands Prix. The new Canon-Williams cars feature the Sega colours and carry the full endorsement of Sonic The Hedgehog.

Says Damon Hill: "This is the most important year of my life and I'm thrilled to be working with both Williams and Sega at the same time."

"When I'm not in the car I'm usually playing a bit of golf or football on my Mega Drive."

"It is good to know that we have Sonic - who is, of course, the world's fastest hedgehog - on the team.

Says Prost: "The eyes of the world will be on the Williams team this year after the fantastic success in 1992 and I welcome the support of Sega Europe for the season."

When not on the sporting field Sega is busy branching out in other entertainment areas.

Crowds

It owns its own Redwood film studio in California where it makes the footage, using actors and actresses, that will be the basis for upcoming games on the Mega CD.

There is even a Sonic hot air balloon, and crowds at the European Grand Prix at Donington glimpsed a Sega airship floating above the race track as well as the Sega helicopter that transported Prost.

Now the company is planning to set up state-of-the-art video entertainment centres all over Britain. It wants to banish forever the idea that amusement arcades are seedy and forbidding places.

The centres will house the latest Virtual Reality machines as well as coin-ops, Quasar, bowling alleys and keep-fit areas.

The first one is set to open in July in Bournemouth - followed by a purpose-built centre in London's Edgware Road.

Says Sega Amusements spokesman Charles Bromfield: "There will also be one built at the Lakeside Shopping Centre in Thurrock, Essex.

"They will be friendly, bright places with restaurants and even education areas."

Planned

Six British centres are planned, with others in Europe marking a new departure for Sega.

In fact one of the few things it is not involved in is a Sega holiday company.

GEAR UP FOR GAMES OF THE FUTURE

CHILDREN just love playing Sega video games. And unlike some toys, they are no passing craze.

Mean Machine magazine estimates that there are around SIX MILLION video game consoles in the UK.

In fact 70 per cent of all households with children now own one of some description.

As the technology leaps forward, all the talk in the playground is of shared advice on games playing, what is new and what's exciting.

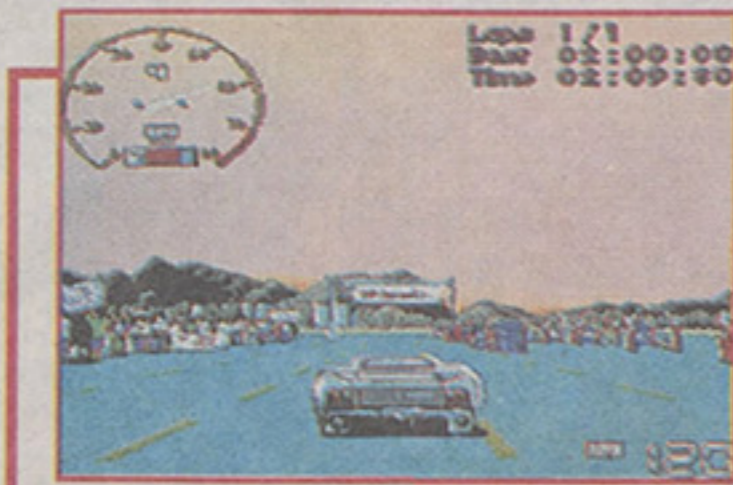

The kids are hungry to learn more.

And to help them, Panini has just developed a series of Sega Super Play Cards packed with vital information for all games enthusiasts.

Secrets of

Grab your chance to rave with the best

IT'S THE video extravaganza everyone is raving about - Game Rave, an exciting mixture of Star Wars theatre with members of the audience playing Sega video games.

And Power Up! is offering you £2 OFF the price of the £6 ticket to see either of the two shows at 11.30am or 2.30pm on Sunday, May 9, at The Beck Theatre, Hayes, Middlesex.

Game Rave, which is all set for a nationwide tour, provides awesome entertainment for the most avid video games players.

Contestants are chosen at random from the audience to play some of the latest games in a knockout competition with fantastic prizes.

And the theatrical aspect is provided by an alien Captain who is visiting Earth to help the human race fight evil invaders - and search for the best video games player around.

It's an absolute must for all game fans.

To claim your £2 off the ticket price, all you have to do is take this page along with you to the show of your choice (no photocopies allowed). You'll pay only £4 instead of £6.

But make sure you're there early to avoid missing out - there are only 500 seats for each show so it's first come, first served.

B RITAIN'S video games industry is set to break through the £1 billion barrier this year and establish itself as the entertainment force of the Nineties.

Sales of pop music singles have collapsed as teenagers switched allegiance from charts to carts, and television has spawned a succession of video games programmes.

None of this would have happened so fast had it not been for Sega's mighty Mega Drive, Britain's biggest-selling games console.

Before it launched in September 1990, only basic eight-bit games consoles were available, with blocky graphics and mono sound. The 16-bit Mega Drive meant finer graphics, bigger games and stereo sound.

The Mega Drive is easy to operate: plug it into the TV aerial socket, tune in a channel, bung in a cart and off you go.

You can buy the Mega Drive with two hand controllers and the game Sonic The Hedgehog for £129.99.

Here are five of the best games for the Mega Drive:

Console yourself with the greatest systems

- Desert Strike: A helicopter shoot-em-up with five complex campaigns.
- Sonic The Hedgehog 2: A graphically mind-blowing platform romp starring a blue hedgehog.
- Ecco The Dolphin: An instant classic with beautiful underwater caves and mazes.
- PGA Tour Golf II: The best golf sim on any console with great views, shots and plenty of stats.

● Thunderforce IV: The latest of the blast-em-up series with awesome sprites and a challenge to match.

Sega's eight-bit machine, the Master System II, lacks the sophistication of its big brother, Mega Drive, but is excellent for junior players starting out.

And the fantastic carts for this console are a lot cheaper than Mega Drive games.

It's simple to use: just plug it into the television - and play.

The basic system, including the built-in game Alex Kidd In Miracle World, costs just £49.99.

Here are five class carts for the Master System II:

- Castle of Illusion: A Mickey Mouse platformer with stunning animation matched only by the follow-up, Land of Illusion.
- Super Kick Off: Football sims can be dodgy but this one scores all the way.
- Prince of Persia: The best-ever eight-bit graphics cart.
- Populous: Probably the best version of this God game where you wreak destruction on your enemies.
- The Lucky Dime Caper: Seven levels of platform romp with Donald Duck and gorgeous graphics.

Sega's colour portable hand-held Game Gear is the most street-cred piece of kit around.

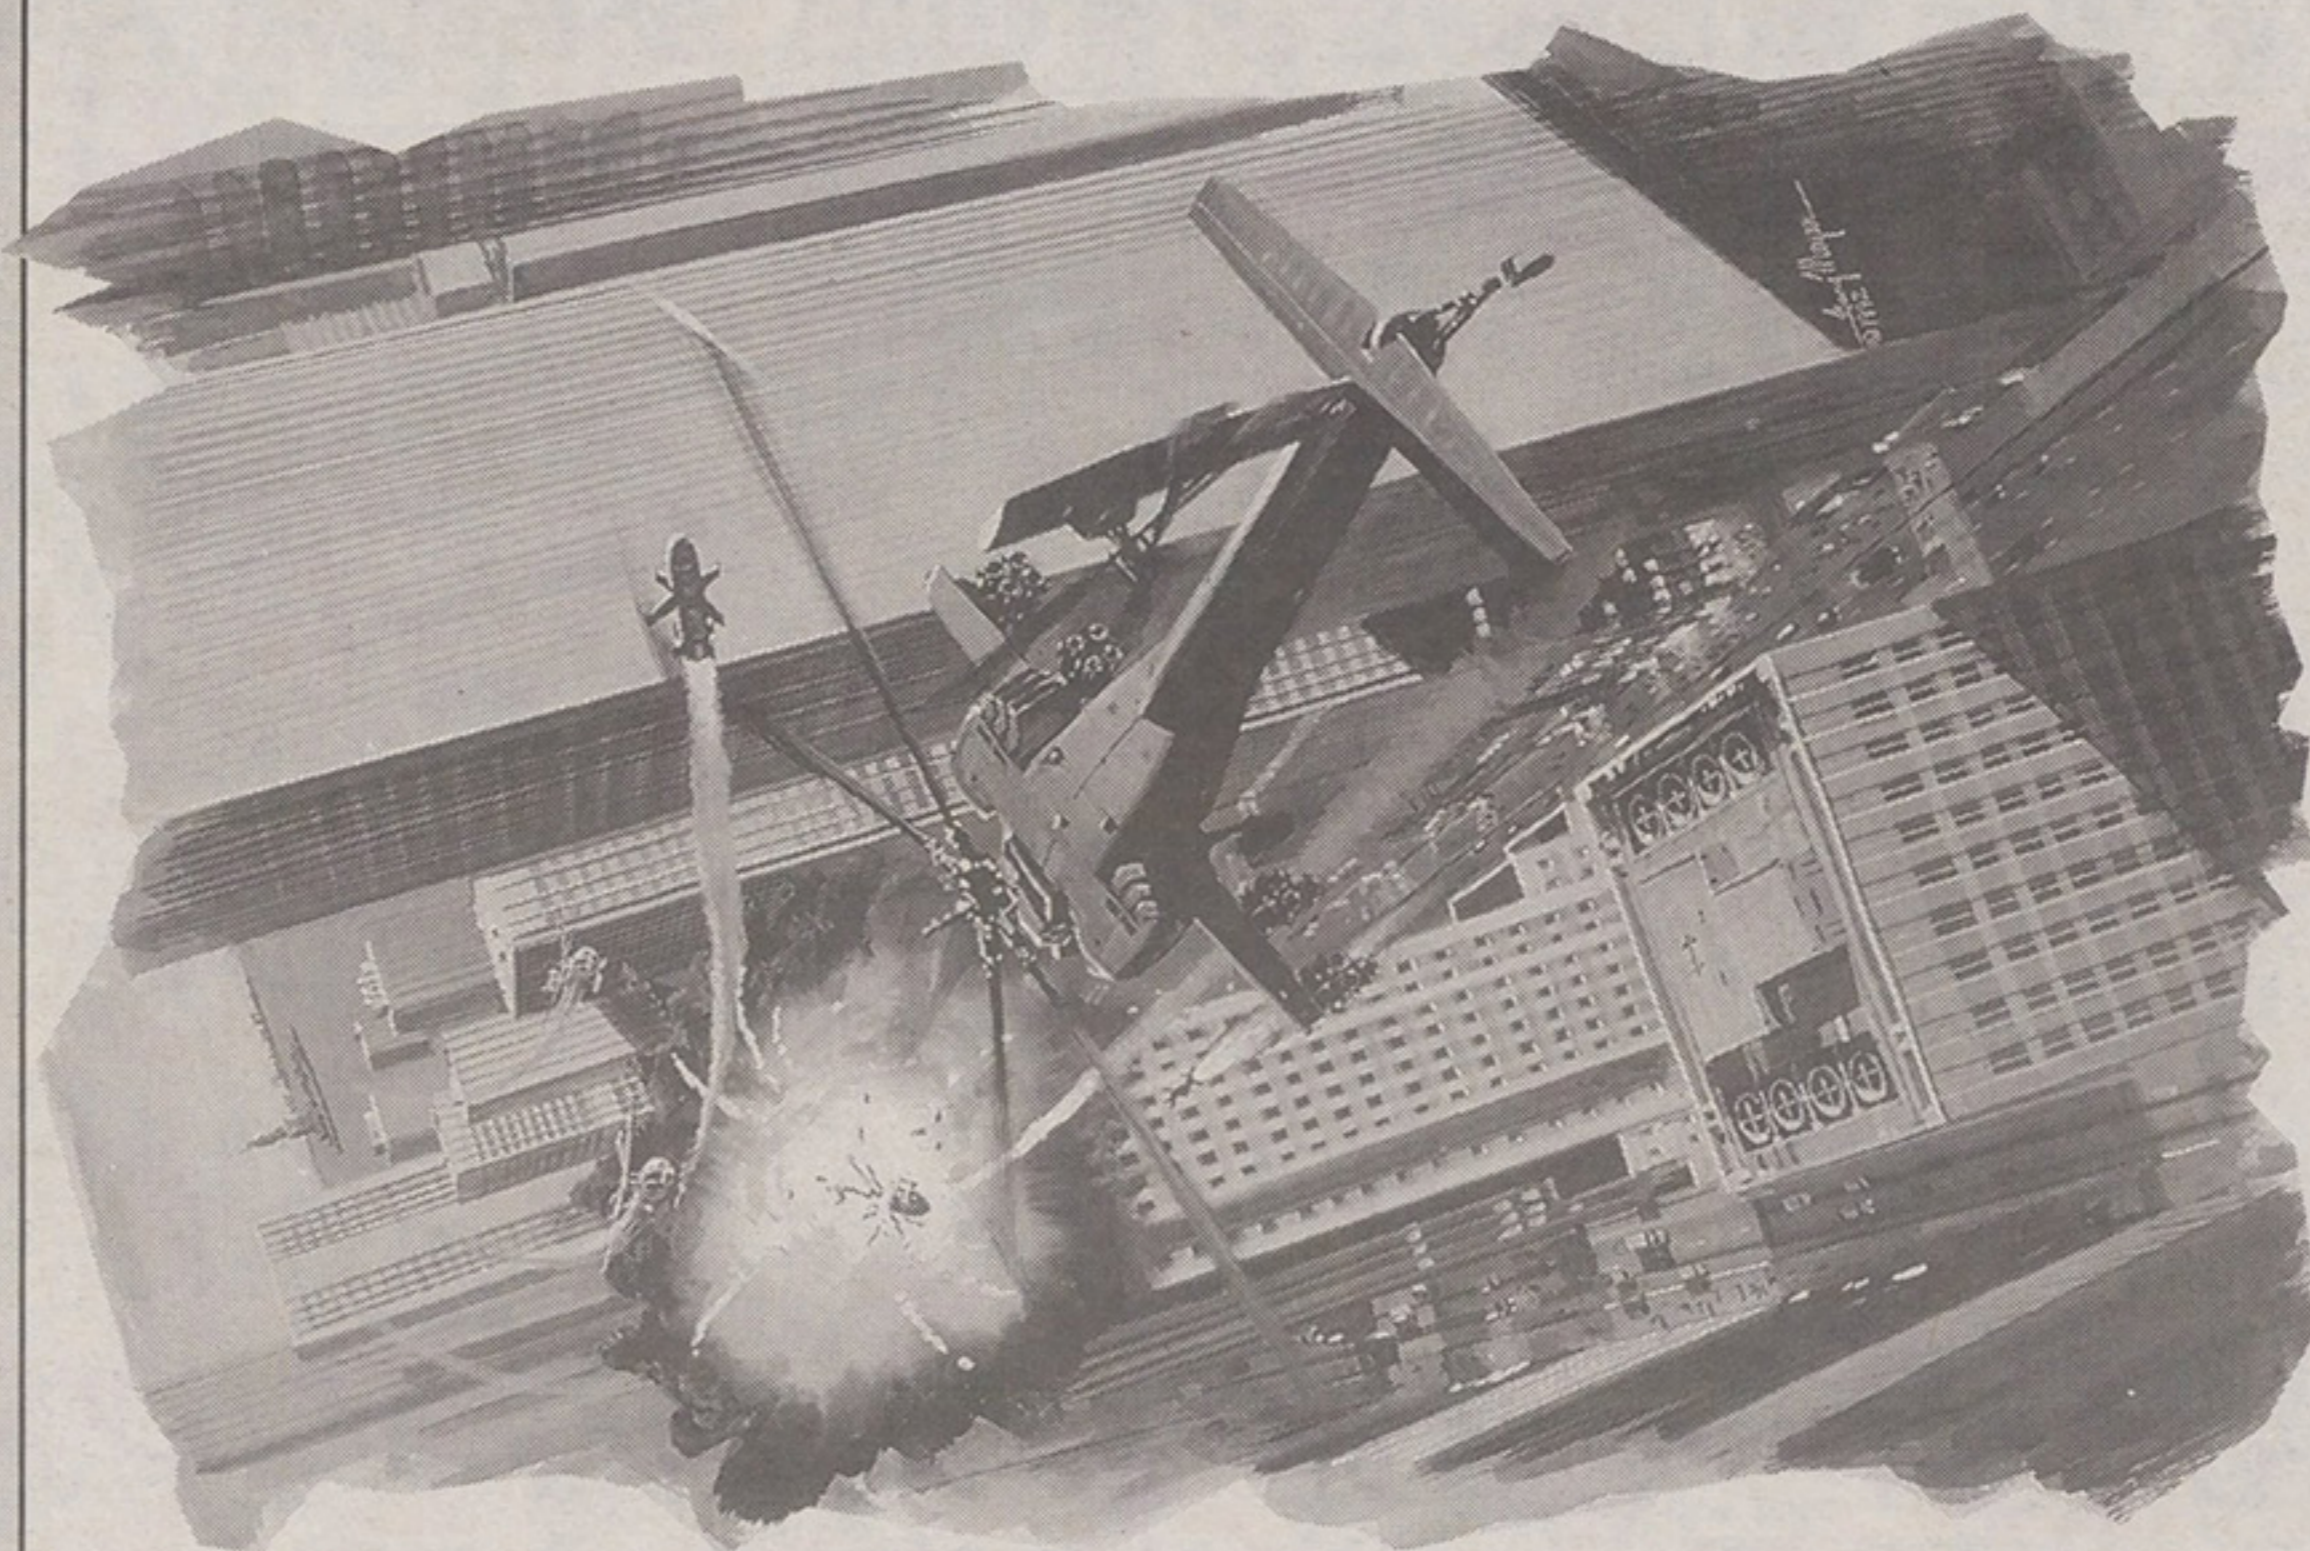

You can take it anywhere. Or use the AC adaptor to plug it into the mains at home.

It's the world's biggest-selling colour portable, and you can even plug a TV tuner into it and use it as an ordinary telly.

Bundled with the addictive puzzle game Columns it costs £99.99.

Here are five great games for the Game Gear:

- Spider-Man: A classy game with fine animation and brilliant soundtrack as you sling your web from building to building.
- The Chessmaster: An excellent chess sim with digitised speech.
- Super Off-road Racer: A near-perfect coin-op conversion that lets you compete with a friend via a Gear-to-Gear cable.
- Sonic The Hedgehog 2: A different game to the one on the Mega Drive but just as impressive with some tough end-of-level bosses.
- Lemmings: Saving these suicidal rodents becomes very addictive.

TAKING a helicopter ride across the New York skyline should be the trip of a lifetime - but not when you're tackling the first level of Cobra Command.

This game, which comes free with the Mega CD, is an excellent conversion of a laserdisc game.

But watch out - this is definitely more of a terrorist than a tourist ride and you can get hit by a whole range of deadly weapons.

wrap-around sound and is best heard through stereo headphones as the helicopter pitches and rolls around on the screen.

Excellent speech and radio chatter contribute to the exciting atmosphere.

As you wing your way through 10 increasingly difficult levels, you'll need to keep your wits about you.

On your travels you will find yourself in Rome, the Grand Canyon, Easter Island, a jungle, oilfields and eventually the Great Fortress.

It's a tough challenge and, while it may not go down as a classic game, Cobra Command does show the great potential behind the Mega CD.
