Gremlin, Ramtek In Legal Tangle

Gremlin Industries, Inc. of San Diego, Cal., has announced that it filed a lawsuit for trademark infringement against Ramtek Corp., Sunnyvale, Cal., on January 14, 1977. The products involved are coin-operated video games. The trademarks involved are Blockade by Gremlin and Barricade by Ramtek.

At a preliminary injunction hearing in the Superior Court for Los Angeles County on March 10, Charles E. McEwan, president of Ramtek filed a statement. The statement, according to Gremlin sources, indicated that Ramtek Corp. had stopped producing Barricade-designated video games. The statement also said that if Ramtek produces further video games of this type, they will be designated by the name of Brickyard.

After the hearing, Frank Fogleman, president of Gremlin, announced that, while Ramtek's discontinuation of the Barricade designation was welcome, Gremlin intends to pursue the lawsuit against Ramtek vigorously through trial in an effort to obtain money damages and a permanent injunction.

Fogleman also announced that Gremlin is issuing a letter to the Ramtek distributors advising them of the latest development in the lawsuit and demanding that the use of the Barricade designation by the distributors be discontinued on any such video games in their possessions.

According to Mel McEwan, director of sales at Ramtek, however, Ramtek is vigorously challenging the claims made by Gremlin that its trademark is infringed by the Barricade designation.

Ramtek contends that the Barricade name is not confusingly similar to Gremlin's alleged trademark Blockade and that neither name can be a valid trademark since both are merely descriptive of the blocking type video game to which they are applied. Ramtek has filed a cross complaint for unfair competition against Gremlin Industries, according to McEwan, "in an effort to prevent harassment of Ramtek's customers by Gremlin's threats of suit."

To date, according to sources at Ramtek, Gremlin's request for a temporary restraining order against Ramtek has been denied. Gremlin thereafter requested that the judge be disqualified. Gremlin's subsequent request to a new judge for a preliminary injunction against Ramtek was also denied.

In order to "demonstrate Ramtek's good faith to the Court," a company spokesman told Play Meter, "Ramtek has voluntarily agreed to cease production of Barricade designated games pending the outcome of this lawsuit." Any blocking games manufactured in the interim will be designated Brickvard.

Ramtek President Charles E. McEwan's declaration to the court, the spokesman said, expressly stated that this was done only to spare Ramtek's customers further harassment. The Court took note of this declaration, he continued, in denying Gremlin's request for a preliminary injunction against Ramtek.

In a statement released to the press, Ramtek declared that it "has never knowingly infringed anyone's trademark rights. The Barricade designation was chosen in accordance with Ramtek's long established policy in naming its games descriptively, such as, Hockey, Soccer, Volly, Trivia, and Horoscope. Ramtek believes such names cannot function as trademarks and cannot infringe the trademarks of others.

"Ramtek firmly believes that competition in the video game field should be carried out fairly and honestly in the marketplace and not in a courtroom."

AMOA Board Meets

At its recent mid-year meeting, held March 24-26 in Houston, Texas, the AMOA Board of Directors voted unanimously to continue holding the annual Exposition and Trade Show in Chicago.

The resolution passed reads as follows: "We reaffirm that the AMOA Exposition and Trade Show will continue to be held in Chicago and that the AMOA will, as it has always done, make every effort to to hold its annual show concurrently with NAMA when that association meets in Chicago for its annual convention."

NAMA recently voted to expand its exhibits to include music and amusement machines but indicated that that would not change the association's "long-standing commitment to represent exclusively the merchandise vending and manual foodservice interest of its membership." NAMA also invited AMOA to move with it out of Chicago.

Listed as reasons for continuing to hold the AMOA Exhibition and Trade Shows in Chicago were the success, year after year, of the Chicago show; the favorable location of Chicago as a transportation center to both foreign and U.S. visitors; and the wide range of facilities offered by the city in terms of housing, accomodations, restaurants and entertainment. Also noted was the fact that AMOA trade shows have become identified with Chicago "as the mecca for games and music people from around the world."

In accordance with its long-standing policy to arrange show dates

Sherwood Joins Cinematronics

Jim Pierce, president of Cinematronics, Inc., El Cajon, Cal., has announced the appointment of Bob Sherwood to the post of director of marketing, effective immediately.

Sherwood formally held positions with Chicago Coin as director of international sales, assistant to the president and most recently, director of marketing. His service with ChiCoin covered an eight year span.

In discussing his appointment, Sherwood stated, "I am very excited and pleased to be joining a firm as progressive as Cinematronics. They are fortunate to have one of the finest engineering staffs in the industry as evidenced by the line of new arcade pieces, the first to be released April," Sherwood added.

According to Pierce, Sherwood is presently establishing a worldwide network of distributors. Pierce further stated, "We are extremely pleased to have a man of Bob's caliber and experience joining our team here at Cinematronics and look forward to utilizing his talents for our continued growth."

Sherwood will soon be relocating to the El Cajon area with his wife, Chris, and their four children.

current with those of NAMA when that show is scheduled for Chicago, the Board announced that the 1979 Exposition and Trade Show will be held October 26-28. The NAMA show is scheduled for October 25-28 in 1979.

The AMOA further issued an invitation to NAMA "to hold its annual shows in Chicago and to work with the AMOA to establish concurrent dates whenever possible for the convenience of the whole industry."

In other business, the Board of Directors voted to hold the line on exposition fees, both for registration and exhibition, and, at least for 1977, to continue the no charge policy for special events. It decided to return the Regional Seminar to Chicago, despite the success of the Denver seminar, again because of Chicago's convenience to travellers. The mid-year board meeting for 1978 was set for Scottsdale, Ariz.

TECHNICAL TOPICS

Servicing remotely controlled wall games can be a harrowing experience for a field mechanic with limited electronics background. Because the system includes a transmitter, a receiver and a logic system (with its associated drivers and display units), fault diagnoses can often be a painstaking process of trial and error. Fortunately there are quite a few "tricks" to diagnosing and repairing the little devils, so let's take a look at the system and how to troubleshoot it.

The majority of wall game problems are in the transmitter box. The box is subject to great abuse at the hands of players, and failure can often be attributed to a fumbled lateral across the back bar. The shock from the drop can break the crystal, and so the transmitter fails. Crystals are a major replacement item for the transmitter. (Batteries and push button switches are also high failure items but their diagnosis is simple, and I'll say no more than to keep them on hand at all times for field service.)

One frequent field problem lies in determining if the transmitter is working properly. As a result of this many servicemen have been haunting Radio Shack for C.B. goodies like field strength meters, crystal checkers, and the like. There is, however, a highly simplified test for the transmitter that you may already be equipped to perform.

Through the miracle of Harmonic Radiation, the transmission from the "box" can be picked up on the high end of your standard FM radio! Just tune in around 108 MHz and, if transmitter is functioning properly, you'll here a tone modulated signal. This is possible because the fundamental frequency of the transmitter is approximately 27MHz. This gives it a fourth harmonic frequency of (27 x 4 =) 108 MHz. (See box.)

Since many vehicles are equipped with combination AM-FM radios, you may already have a mobile test station that can give you positive results without a penny of investment.

It is important to note that the transmitter radiates a tone modulated signal. In this respect, the FM radio performs a function more valuable than all those C.B. gadgets. The radio allows you to actually hear what is coming from the transmitter and so you can instantly verify the presence of the tone and its frequency. (Transmitter frequency adjustment will be covered in Part II of this series. Watch for it in next month's Update!)

WHAT IS A HARMONIC?

Harmonics occur in nature whenever oscillation takes place. Simply stated, a harmonic has a frequency that is an integral multiple of its fundamental frequency. The organist, who might be playing the fundamental note "A" (440 cycles per second), can also bring in a second harmonic (880 cycles per second) or a third harmonic (1320 cycles per second) to enrich the total sound of the note being played.

We can make use of harmonic radiation to receive the 27 MHz being transmitted by the "box." A standard broadcast FM radio is all that is required to pick up the fourth harmonic, as shown below.

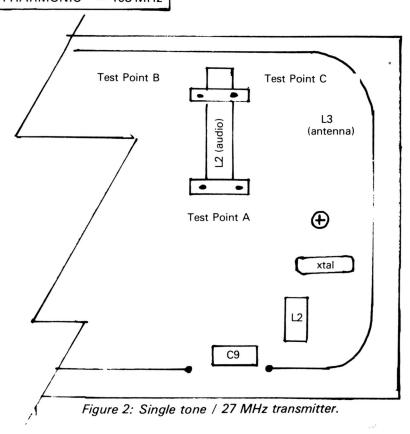

FUNDAMENTAL FREQUENCY

SECOND HARMONIC = 54 MHz
THIRD HARMONIC = 81 MHz
FOURTH HARMONIC = 108 MHz

The tone is the "key" that unlocks a circuit in the receiver board. This allows a hi or lo signal to pass to the logic circuits of the game. If the tone is missing or considerably off frequency, the game will work erratically or not at all. In Gremlin's Playball game, for example, preswinging faults can be traced to a bad switch, bad batteries, and/or lack of audio modulation.

Loss of the modulating signal can almost invariably be traced to a broken wire on the audio coil. (See Figure 2.) This can be easily checked with an OHM meter which should show 90 OHMS between test point A and test point B, and 130 OHMS between test point C. A broken coil can be repaired if you can find the end of the wire and perform micro-surgery on it. The break usually occurs at a post where vibration has broken the connection.

Part II of this series will include a step by step system for field diagnoses and repair of wall game transmitters, all centered around the use of your FM radio. Tune in next month!

MUSIC PROGRAMMING

by Michael B. Klein

Last week, I had a rather unusual experience I would like to relate to you. Ordinarily, I wouldn't have given it a second thought, nor would I be concerned, but since it has to do with both my (regular) business and your full-time business, I feel that it's quite important.

I would like to preface my comments with some information that will make them credible. I have always been involved with the record/music business, mostly as a reviewer, but for many years, my "full-time" experience has been in advertising, as a writer and a writer-broadcast producer. And, I have worked for the two largest advertising agencies in the world. Okay, enough said.

During the week, the phone rang, and on the other end was a major independent record company, one of the largest, and in my opinion as far as product goes-one of the best. I was called because of my advertising experience; they needed a copywriter. After a brief conversation with the ad manager, and after seeing some of their previous work, I had to draw the conclusion that these people had no idea what advertising is about, neither how to use it, nor what it can do. The record company was at least 10 years behind the times. And from what I have seen, their case is by no means unique.

For such a large industry, with millions of dollars at stake on unknown artsits, their advertising and marketing is, to say the least, primitive. There are so many great artists and records out there that never make it because of that fact. And your sales—as well as the artists'—suffer because of it.

Of course, I realize we are dealing with something different from soap cars or fashion items. success, the same marketing and advertsing philosophy which is used for any of the above mentioned products can apply. The record companies seem to put all of their money into established artists, whose records are going to sell regardless of advertising: Neil Diamond, John Denver, Elton John, etc. etc. Bear in mind, the advertising I'm talking about here is consumer advertising, not trade advertising.

People will buy products they have never heard of. . with the right advertising. Look at all the new detergents, toothpastes, mouthwashes and other items that are "new" every year. They don't cost any more than a single record. . . and they sell. People are curious. . . and they buy. The same applies to the music industry. And it applies to the singles I'll review. Now! Get with it, all you record company executives. This is not 1957; join us in the year 1977.

I Just Want to Be Your Everything—Andy Gibb/RSO RS 872.

Andy Gibb is one of the very talented Gibb brothers (Barry is the other) who make up the Bee Gees. And this single has that very popular sound. If my guess is right, this could well be a hit. It has that modern, now, hip sound about it, which has made the Bee Gees such a tremendous group, popular with all music lovers . . . both black and white. As a matter of fact, I heard this record, shortly after I received it, on the television program, Soul Train. There isn't too much to say about this single except that it has hit written all over it, and if your customers have played the Bee Gees, they will play this one too. A definite YES.

Big White House in Indiana—Larry Groce/Warner Bros. WBS 8327

In the past I have reviewed Larry's records with only favorable things to say. And this single is no exception. But here we have a perfect example of where advertising could make a star. To my knowledge, Larry Groce's records have not been played on the radio, at least not in the Los Angeles area. This disc has a very modern country sound and could be put in just about any jukebox. It is a crossover record. with a medium tempo and fine vocals. Watch the charts for this one. If it makes it, I would place in your country locations to start.

Rain All Over You—Max D. Barnes/ Polydor PD 14386

If you didn't read the label on this single, you would swear you were listening to Waylon Jennings. I'm not certain what impact this type of sound has on the listener—whether it will sell more Waylon Jennings records, or whether it will make Max Barnes a star too. Nevertheless this is a good record.

Max has fine styling, a hip country sound and superb production on this one. But again, I wouldn't put this one in your jukeboxes unless it makes it on the charts.

I would say that any one of these records could be a hit, given the proper exposure and advertising. Even the Andy Gibb record, which sounds like the Bee Gees, has to be brought to the attention of the record buyer and jukebox customer. For as a rule, most people won't know that Andy Gibb is a Bee Gee.

Advertising is a powerful force, and it can make you, as well as the record companies . . . more money. As a cliche that is used extensively in advertising says, "Be Wise, Advertise!"
