1992 WINTER CONSUMER ELECTRONICS SHOW

Hot Titles and Exciting Products

The one thing that consumers want to know about from every CES is what products are going to be coming out in the next few months. Kids are especially insistent when it comes to new information on hot games and accessories that will enhance their game play.

Winter CES was not disappointing when it came to having a lot of hot new products. The Super NES in particular was very impressive, having a new title for the system in virtually every booth of the Nintendo licensees.

The Super NES Wins Big at CES

One of the hottest properties was Street Fighter II from Capcom. As one of the most popular arcade titles in recent months, this game drew a large crowd at Capcom's booth. CES attendees were impressed with the game's dedication to the arcade machine.

Konami's Turtles 4 will be coming soon for the S-NES.

Tradewest was also impressive with their 16-Bit version of the NES hit Battletoads. New moves and greatly improved graphics were the high points of this title.

Konami's booth packed a double wallop with Contra 3 and TMNT 4. Both of these series have proven to be top sellers, and the first Super NES games in these series have improvements in virtually every aspect from graphics to game play. Contra 3 has already been heavily covered in EGM, whetting the appetites of game players everywhere.

Contra 3 from Konami should prove to be a big seller for the 16-Bit crowd.

The list of hot games for the Super NES contained Wings 2 from Namco, Out of this World from Interplay, Super Battletank from Absolute Entertainment, Data East's Ultrabots, and Soulblader from Enix. The old workhorse - the NES had some

Turbo Gets a Boost

With the new company formed by NEC and Hudson Soft came a whole list of exciting games and a more powerful version of the CD-

ROM unit. Games like Gate of Thunder, Shadow of the Beast, R-Type Complete, and Prince of Persia will show consumers that NEC's system has a great deal of power.

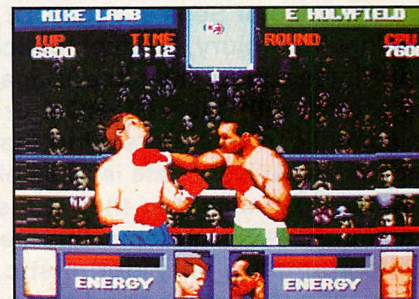

Turbo Technologies ran an impressive side-by-side display of their new CD-ROM unit against Sega's CD system from Japan. This move shows a renewed confidence in the system that many thought would soon fade into the woodwork.

Sega Waits till June

With the absence of their Mega CD, Sega had surprisingly little to show at CES. They did show their new boxing game and a talking baseball update. This is typical of Sega though, as they traditionally show their hot games at the Summer CES. While Sega isn't out of the race by any means, Nintendo did get the lion's share of the attention.

NEO-GEO is Hot!

SNK came out smokin' with a new shooter, sports updates and a martial arts street fighting game. It was easy to see that this IS real arcade action!

Sega's line-up included the newly licensed Evander Holyfield boxing game.

GAME OF THE SHOW!

STREET FIGHTER 2 - No competition here! This 16 meg wonder IS perfect in every way! Everything from the arcade game is in here!

Without a doubt Nintendo and its licensees had some of the most innovative and spectacular software ever seen on a home system to date. We were very impressed with Zelda 3, Street Fighter 2, Super Megaforce, Turtles 4, Super Battletoads, Out of this World, Super Adventure Island and Wings 2, just to mention a few from a long list. As you scan through these pages of new carts you will see companies doing some very exciting programming with digitized graphics, filled polygon graphics and super shooters which don't slow down nor show any of the flicker problems that the first generation of carts had. The sports games are filling up fast as are the arcade translations. RPG's are pushing the 12 meg barrier and the audio that they're pumping out is better than anything short of the CD disc games.

Then to top it off, Nintendo dropped the bomb on the competition when they announced that their CD-I compatible CD-ROM (with full motion video capabilities) will cost almost half the price of Sega's Mega CD! To add insult to injury, sources indicate that Nintendo just may beat Sega to the stores with their CD-ROM drive as some licensees are saying that a September delivery date is possible!

Nintendo claims that they will sell 6 million S-NES systems this year. While sounding very optimistic, if they continue to make good software as we have seen at this CES, they just might become the number one 16 bit machine.

AMAZING TENNIS Absolute

Absolute has created the most realistic version of tennis to date. Featuring large players and very smooth animation, this sim. stands well above the competition. Worth waiting for!

SUPER BATTLE TANK Absolute

Battletank was good but Absolute pushes the S-NES to the limits with this one. The missions are timely, very detailed and require lots of strategy.

NBA Acclaim

While the game was only a demo, what we saw was great! Utilizing all digitized graphics throughout, this basketball cart, once fine tuned, could set new standards in realism and detail.

SUPER SHANGHAI Activision

They did the GameBoy version and now on the S-NES we can finally see what the tiles look like! A fun tile-matching puzzle game which can become addicting after a while!

MIGHT & MAGIC 2 American Sammy

The original was a good RPG, but now that the sequel is on the S-NES, the quest is much harder and longer. Outstanding graphics with some of the best sounds to date!

SPELLCRAFT Ascii

This quest adventure/RPG was only running as a demo. It consists of various quests which have you traveling to many different countries all around the world.

FACEBALL 2000 Bullet Proof

It was tough to pick a clear winner in the NES category. Felix the Cat by Hudson had the best game play and most interesting concept.

Despite what the companies are saying about how there still is a lot of life in the NES, the action, and games, were not in this format. Virtually every company had at least one Super Nintendo game and it was very clear that that is where they are putting their game development money. Still, each licensee had something to show for the NES and there still will be a constant supply of new software throughout the year. The main difference was that this time there were not any truly exceptional games. None were sporting massive amounts of memory or new exotic MMC chips.

One trend which was noted at this show was the expansion of the cartoon oriented game category. Felix the Cat by Hudson Soft was the best with Wacky Races by Atlus not far behind.

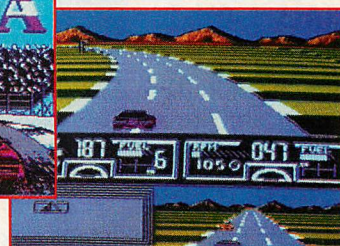

RPG's were well represented with Might and Magic, Dragon Warrior 3 and 4 and Dragon Fighter as this category works well on the NES where spectacular graphics aren't needed. Most of the memory goes to the quest anyway.

Additional sports games are trickling in with Tecmo's Tecmo Cup, ASC's Power Punch, Romstar's Baseball and Tradewest's Danny Sullivan's Indy Heat.

While not the most impressive line up, companies usually save their best games for the June CES, as then they will be showing the games that will be coming out for Christmas.

There really weren't a whole lot of new games in the Sega booth. But of the ones there, Splatterhouse 2 gets the not for the best game.

Challenging game play and exceptional (but gory) graphics.

To everyone's surprise Sega didn't have a tremendous amount of new software on display at this show. The Mega CD was nowhere in sight (it was being demonstrated behind closed doors) and the only place where people were able to see this marvelous peripheral was at the demonstration set up at the EGM booth.

Sega had their Sports Talk Baseball and the new Holyfield boxing game along with the D & D RPG. Sonic 2 was nowhere to be seen and Batman 2 wouldn't even be acknowledged.

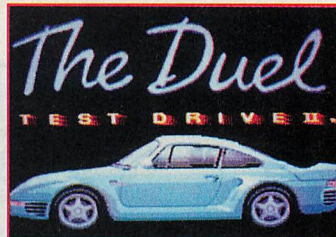

The licensees had quite a few new carts but nothing was truly revolutionary. Namco had the sequel to Splatterhouse and Arena had a potential hit with Alien 3. The Game Genie was running an invincible Sonic the Hedgehog to show off what it could do but other than that the Sega booth was unspectacular.

Even though the showing was weak, this is typical of Sega as they usually bring out their big guns at the Summer CES. These Summer CES games are the ones which would be on sale for the all important Christmas shopping season.

The only problem to all this is the fact that Nintendo had a good showing and with Sega holding a slim lead (or no lead, depending on whose system numbers you believe) one would think that they would at least have had a few 'teaser' sneak peeks out to show everybody that they have something special lined up for the second half.

The best of the new Turbo games is an easy one to pick. Gate of Thunder packs more action than most of the other games at the show - regardless of system!

While not on the CES floor, the New Turbo Technologies did have a demonstration suite off site. Considering how little time they had to pick and assemble their new games, they did a pretty good job of choosing a wide selection of interesting Japanese CD-ROM discs and cartridges.

The RPGs are solid titles, but they will require a tremendous amount of language conversion. A new Y's would have been a welcome sight among a batch of unknown games, as this would give the U.S. players something they could relate to.

There were a few shooters being displayed and some had well known names. The complete R-Type CD looked good, although only the cinemas were new, and Gradius and Salamander from Konami were on display. Again, other than improved graphics, these games were nothing players haven't seen before. If Turbo Technologies really wants to make an impression on the U.S. players they ought to look at new titles like the spectacular 8 meg Parodius.

On the U.S. side, Camp California-CD, Lord of the Rising Sun-CD, Shapeshifter and Loom were some of the better titles.

All of this was overshadowed by the long awaited and not-too-secret new 32 bit machine. Turbo Tech. was showing that to developers in another room and this machine looked hot! Pictures and specs next issue!

LADY PHANTOM Turbo Technologies

Lady Phantom is a new RPG specifically designed for the Turbo CD-ROM. It features highly detailed cinemas and fantastic music!

SHADOW OF THE BEAST Turbo Technologies

GRADIUS Turbo Technologies

SALAMANDER Turbo Technologies

Entitled Life Force here in the States, Salamander really improves on the original intensity and fun of the NES version!

PSYCHIC STORM Turbo Technologies

Definitely one of the more intense shooters at the show was Psychic Storm. Everything was top notch. A definite winner!

DUNGEON MASTER

Turbo Technologies

Just released for the Super Fami-com, Dungeon Master takes role playing to the limit with an involving quest and great graphics.

SCHWARZCHILD

Turbo Technologies

A new type of strategy game for the Turbo takes place far into the future. Plan strategies and send your fleets into battle!

LORD OF THE RISING SUN

When SNK sits down to program a shooter, they really know how to do it well! Last Resort sports some of the best graphics, fastest action and largest bosses ever to hit a home screen. But then, with 50+ meg in the cart you know this is a real arcade game!

NEO-GEO came to the CES to show how good a home game system can really be! This elite system now has cartridges that other manufacturers only dream of. While others say...wait for our CD games...SNK says look at what we have now.

If you want sports games, only NEO-GEO can give you real action whether it be football, baseball, racing or even bowling.

Martial arts-type street fighting games are in the works also, as are the side scrolling shooters.

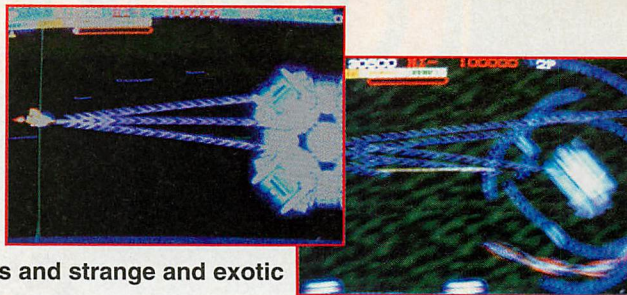

The fun doesn't stop here though. Besides their wide assortment of 'true arcade' titles, SNK has third party companies lined up to bring us even more of what we want to see.

It took some time for the NEO-GEO to develop a following but this list of devoted players is growing every day. Now with the competition talking more and more about CD the players can see that to come up with a system that approaches the quality of the NEO-GEO you would have to spend almost as much for the other systems plus their CD-ROM. So why not just buy the NEO-GEO in the first place?

1992 is going to be a good year for SNK, and with the great line-up of new softs coming soon, they are well on their way to becoming one of the major players!
